Farmingville, NY – On April 25, Councilman Kevin LaValle and Legislator Tom Muratore hosted their first blood drive of the year at the Middle Country Public Library in Selden. The event, which was held in partnership with the New York Blood Center, brought in 25 pints of blood over the course of the day and, as an added bonus, donors were offered two free tickets to a future Mets game. "Blood donations save lives, and I thank everyone who came down to help our drive," said Councilman LaValle. "I'd especially like to acknowledge the people from the Middle Country Public Library for their support of this event and so many more that they allow us to have here at the library."
